

Jonathan Pogoda

Alice's apartment is cold. She gives me a tour. I collect old cameras she says. She says she has a bunch in a display case. She asks if I collect anything.

These are my visitors, she says. Anyone who enters the apartment gets their picture on the fridge. House rules, she says.

There three pictures there. This friend, she says, she points to a picture. She was shy so I just took a picture of her shoes.

She asks if I want anything to drink. Says she'll get her camera. Here she says, stand over there, stand in front of the wall. Are you ready, she says. Yeah, she says, look real spaced out. She takes the picture.